July 27, 2020. Miami, Florida. The U.S Minority Chamber of Commerce announces an official support to Mr. Mauricio Claver-Carone, the current head of Western Hemisphere affairs at the National Security Council of the United States. As a president of the Inter-American Development Bank, breaking an unwritten agreement and bureaucracy since the bank's inception in 1959 that it would be led by an amazing public official of President Donald Trump Administration.

"The Private sector in the region is making a call of the importance to change the administration of the past behavior, need to breaking with tradition as well as the poor result that in the last 60 years operate IDB , they take advantage of the public funding of the United States", said, Doug Mayorga, President and Founder of the U.S. Minority Chamber of Commerce, " this is a message to the enemy of the United States Increased, all process and fundament of a new IDB will be under the U.S. influence over the largest source of development financing for Latin America and the Caribbean would also give the United States a leg up on China in a part of the world where Beijing's economic influence has been rapidly growing".

At the U.S. MCC we are committed to put a message that the United States will offer significant resources, funding, and opportunities for the economy in the region under the administration of Mr. Claver-Coron. The nomination effectively closes the door to several Latin American countries that planned to nominate their own candidates for the September election to replace Colombian Luis Alberto Moreno, who has served three five-year terms as bank president. In its 60-year history, the IDB has had only four presidents, all of them serving multiple terms. But Latin America and the Caribbean is worse in all aspects.
